To Whom It May Concern:

My wife and I hired Castle Construction to build our home based on the strong recommendation of a close and well respected friend who said: "if you want quality work, honest and reliable communication, and you want to know you are doing everything right the first time, then you want Reno Coletti and John Hunter to build your home." We found this advice to be true. We love our home and enjoyed the experience of building it with Castle Construction.

As first time homebuilders, we relied heavily on Castle's counsel and expertise. We had always feared that building a home would be frustrating and exhausting. But we discovered that building a home with Castle Construction was a fun and rewarding experience. Reno Coletti and John Hunter were always patient, responsive, respectful, and extremely considerate of our feelings and concerns. They came to meetings upbeat, prepared and well organized, and they maximized the efforts of everyone involved. Their conscientiousness was evident at all times, at both the site of the project, which was always clean and orderly, and in the paper work and other correspondence, which was always very clear and accurate. Even the smallest details were looked after carefully and thoroughly.

Now, three years after completion, Jennifer and I are still extremely happy with our home, and we are very grateful for having had the opportunity to work with Reno Coletti and John Hunter of Castle Construction. We are absolutely certain that we would hire them again and would recommend them to anyone else who is considering building a home and would like to "do it right the first time."

Sincerely,
